

Oakland and the World: Race and Empire in a Pacific Seaport

4月2日(水)
14:30-15:30

講演要旨

Located on the northern coast of California across the bay from San Francisco, Oakland is rarely perceived as a city with a global history. Nevertheless, this talk contends that Oakland's reach has long extended far beyond its municipal borders. The city is an ideal site for understanding how people, money, ideas, and various forms of domination have traveled back and forth across the Pacific Ocean for hundreds of years. By situating Oakland in broader histories of global race-making and imperial expansion, we can better appreciate how overlooked places contributed to the rise of the transpacific world.

- 日時: 2025年4月2日 (水) 14:30-15:30
- 場所: プロジェクトスペース (アゴラグローバル3階)
- 言語: 英語 (通訳なし)
- 申し込み: 不要
- 主催: 太平洋を《架橋》するブリッジ・パーソン養成プログラム
- 問い合わせ: TP-Bridge事務局
Email: tenkai-bridge-coordinator@tufs.ac.jp

Andrew Klein, PhD
Postdoctoral Fellow
National Park Service

Andrew Klein is a historian of race, cities, and the global United States. He is a Mellon Humanities Postdoctoral Fellow at the San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park and an incoming Assistant Professor of History at Albion College. His writing has appeared in the Journal of American Ethnic History, the Los Angeles Times, The Nation, and Public Books.